Ask the Motor Medics®

Automotive Advice from The Under the Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,
I took my 2012 GMC Yukon into my local mechanic because the brake pedal had become lower to the floor over a weeks' time. Eventually it ended up on the floor and the red brake warning light came on and the ABS warning light. After they looked it over, I was told that every brake line on the vehicle made of steel needs to be replaced due to the rust. The total cost of replacing all these brake lines is over 2000 and I also need front and rear brakes which will add another 600 or so. Is this a common failure? The vehicle has absolutely no rust anywhere on it and I can't understand why the brake lines rusted so badly.

Dear Jerry,
This is a very common problem on many cars and trucks. More so with GM vehicles, at least in our area of the country. The metals used to make the brake lines have been reacting in a bad way to the new chemicals on the roads to treat ice in the winter months. This reaction has caused brake lines to be completely rusted away to the point of failure while other body parts are not nearly as affected. The line sets are not too spendy but the labor to install them is intense, taking an entire day. It is a safety concern and should not be patched. Do it right.

Take care, the Motor Medics.

Dear Motor Medics,
I have a 2015 Jeep Patriot that my daughter uses to drive back and forth to school with. The vehicle has 70k miles on it and seems to be in great shape other than a transmission hot warning light that comes on only when the vehicle has been driving on the highway for more than 30 minutes. If she slows down or stops for a few minutes the light goes off until she gets going again for a few miles. We assume since there are no other issues aside from the light that it must be a false light. What do you think?

Patricia in Branson Mo.

Dear Patricia,
Stop driving this on the highway until you get this sorted out. Based on what we see in our shop alone our suspicion is that it is getting hot and if it is there is damage being done each time. What we see is that the transmission cooler becomes restricted either due to clutch material from the transmission normal wear or a internal failure in the cooler. When this happens, the cooler can no longer keep the fluid cool when the loads are high such as on the highway. The side effect of the excessive heat is transmission damage which will result in a complete rebuild or replacement with a certified used unit and a new cooler. Have your mechanic verify the actual temperature of the transmission after it has been in the highway and make repairs.

Take care, the Motor Medics.
