Ask the Motor Medics®

Automotive Advice from The Under the Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,

I've been saving for my first brand new vehicle for over ten years, and I now have the money to purchase one. I really want a truck but with the miles I drive I'm leaning towards a car even though I could really use the cargo carrying capability of a truck. If I could get over twenty miles per gallon with a truck consistently and still have good power, I could probably go for that. I have been looking at the Ford EcoBoost equipped trucks. Do they really get the mileage they advertise and what is and EcoBoost engine that makes it so different from its regular counterparts?

Grant in Minneapolis Minnesota

Dear Grant,

We have customers who own these trucks and they have been very happy with the fuel economy and reliability so far. EcoBoost is a family of direct injected, gasoline, turbocharged, engines made by Ford. EcoBoost engines are designed to deliver power and torque similar to larger displacement, naturally aspirated engines while getting about 20% better fuel economy and lower greenhouse emissions than these same engines. Ford sees a great future in the EcoBoost technology and intends on using it extensively in future applications. If I were to purchase a new truck today for use as a general commuter and use it for light hauling, I would be taking a close look at this model truck as one of my choices. Fuel savings are important and add up.

Take care, The Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,

I listen to your radio show often and wonder how you guys answer all those questions. Is it true that you don't use any kind of in-studio computers to reference during a show? My question is about recalls. I have been getting recall notices for my Dodge Caravan van for several years. At latest count I have five postcards with recalls on them about my van that say they are safety related but my vehicle is working just fine, and I don't have time to take it in or want them to charge me for a bunch of other work they find. What happens if I don't go in? Is it necessary to have it checked?

Chris in Rock Valley Iowa

Dear Chris,

Yes, it's true that we don't use any kind of reference to answer questions on the show and we don't always know everything. The one thing we don't need a reference guide to know is safety recalls are no joke. They don't spend millions of dollars on postcards for no reason. Your life and others can be at risk for some recalls. The check is free and if they suggest other paid work, you have the right to just say no. If it's an important safety item that needs attention don't neglect it. When you get a recall in the mail follow the contact instructions and arrange to have it checked as soon as you can. Please stay safe.

Take care, The Motor Medics
